Read the following passage and answer the questions.

Rusa Manjhi was a woman Panchayat worker of the Lahiripur Gram Panchayat in the Sunderbans of West Bengal. She showcased the success of women power in rural development in the 1980s. Rusa chose to be a Panchayat functionary as she knew it was the right forum to plan programmes for women, address their needs and have them believe in taking hold on their lives. Earlier, women in the Sunderbans had to depend entirely on the earnings of their men, most of whom were engaged in fishing or collecting honey from the wild. The Panchayat Samitis in early 1980s introduced schemes Like DWCRA, TRYSEM and ICDS in the region. This led to the participation of women, especially the neo-literate and illiterate women, in entrepreneurial programmes. Change was also apparent in the growth of social awareness about women's rights. Women came forward to fight their own battles regarding wife-beating, dowry, desertion and bigamy. Often husbands did not agree with wives becoming self-sufficient. However, the women did not give up on their dream of self-empowerment.

Read the following passage and answer the questions.

FM radio stations, satellite radio and television channels are major avenues for the growth of the music industry. Much of the programming on FM radio channels, like AIR's 'Vividh Bharti', is dedicated to music, primarily to film music. This is equally true of round-the-clock music channels on television. But besides the dedicated music channels, television programming on all 'General Entertainment Channels' in the various Indian languages includes several music-based genres. 'Talent Hunt' programmes focused on singing, dancing and acting are based largely on Indian film music. One of the channels organised a Talent Hunt programme called 'Popstars' which involved the nationwide search for a five member all-girl band of singers. Called 'Viva', the winning band of girls released two albums. In a similar vein a music project called, 'The Underground' was conducted by Saregama India in Mumbai, Delhi and Kolkata in 1980 to select 30 music performers (Bands, Artists and DJs).
